

Editorial

Dear Readers / Research Scholars,

Research activity is a special zeal of the mind. It encourages a person to find new inventions in the interested field. In order to achieve the goal in the field of research one must have three important components-Interest, Information and Investigation. Without Interest one cannot proceed in the field of research. This interest enables him/her to collect the information regarding the subject. This information includes work that has been done so far and to be done further. After getting the information the researcher starts the investigation about the new aspects of the subject. He or She collects all the material that is necessary for his research. In all these three stages the proper guidance of the guide is most important. So my dear Readers/Research Scholars let us keep in mind the above features and try to go ahead in our research activity.
